Shiraz is named after the city of the same name in Iran where the grape was thought to have been originated . We now know that it originated in the Rhone valley of Southern France, at least from Roman times. Today, we can enjoy this grape in the wines of France, Australia and California.

German Riesling may be the most well rounded white wine grape for food pairings. The trouble is the labels are extremely tricky to understand, which makes this wine less user friendly than Chardonnay or Sauvignon Blanc. The secret is to know what the suffixes mean following Riesling. The earlier in the season the drier the wines will be due to higher acid levels and lower sugars.

**Kabinett is the first harvest of six times the riesling grapes will be harvested.*

**Spatlese is the second harvest and this is where some sweetness begins to develop.*

**Auslese can on extremely good vintages very sweet due to the grapes being infected with a mold known as "knoble rot", or botrytis cinerea to the scientists out there.*

**Wines made after the Auslese harvest are dessert wines, in order they are Beerenauslese, Trockenbeerenauslese, and Eiswein which is made from grapes picked after the first freeze.*

Wines with some sweetness lend themselves well to spicy foods, and most shellfish.

Cabernet Sauvignon, Cabernet Franc, Merlot, Petit Verdot, and Malbec are the Red Grapes that comprise the wines of Bordeaux. Chateau's are free to use any combination of these five grapes for their wines.

The region that a wine comes from can give some clues as to what will be in the blend. Saint Emilion and Pomerol are great sources for Merlot and Cabernet Franc, where as the regions in the Haut Medoc (St. Julien, St. Estephe, Pauillac, Pessac Leognan, and Margaux) all tend to make a Cabernet Sauvignon heavy blends.

Many Grapes are permitted to be used in the Cote du Rhone valley, predominantly the reds are blends of Syrah, Grenach, and Mourvedre. However, in the region of Chateauneuf du Pape, there are thirteen grapes permitted to grow, including Counoise, Cinsault, Viognier, Marsanne, Rousanne, Picpoul, and Bouboulenc to name a few. The wines from Chateauneuf du Pape can be blends of red and white grapes, but most are Syrah or Grenache heavy. Cote Rotie's are blends of Syrah and the white wine grape Viognier.

The region of Chateauneuf du Pape was just an ordinary region of vineyards and lavender fields till Pope Clement the IV relocated the papacy from the Vatican to this French hillside.

to date there is still French law that mandates that any plot of land that is wished to grow grapes must be able to sustain lavender as well. Wine critic Robert Parker Jr. made the once deemed "rustic" wines from this appellation famous, and is now considered to be an honorary citizen.

Super Tuscans are a topic of much debate in Italy. The wines spawned new statutes from the Italian government, and the search for the original is still on going. Antinori stakes claim that "Tignanello" was the first while others argue that although it may have been put in the barrel to age first, it was "Ornellaia" that was bottled and put on the market before Tignanello's release.

No matter where the chips may fall, all of the selections above are full bodied beauties and are waiting to be marveled over. Super Tuscans are blends of French grape varietals and native Italian Varietals Sangiovese, Cabernet Sauvignon, and Merlot are the stars of this style.
